Corrugated roofing made for Irish homes

CORDION is a range of corrugated metal roofing designed for Irish homes, and Irish weather conditions.

When it comes to roofing for your home, you want the perfect balance between form and function. CORDION gives you the ultimate flexibility to design and build your dream home.

From traditional to contemporary; in rural, coastal or urban settings, you can be as low-key or impactful as you want.

CORDION is beautiful and easy to live with, and with today's modern installation and insulation methods - noise, typical of other systems is not an issue.

Strength and beauty for superior performance

CORDION is specifically designed for use on residential homes. By using premium quality steel, durable and environmentally friendly coatings we offer home owners the benefits of corrugated roofing without having to compromise on safety, comfort or durability.

Corrugated roofing for agricultural and industrial use is very much part of the Irish design landscape. Today, its clean aesthetic, design flexibility and ease of installation have made it a popular choice for architects, contractors and design-savvy home owners.

Colours that last

Inspired by the Irish landscape, CORDION is available in a range of colours and finishes that can blend in or contrast with your home's surroundings.

Unlike other corrugated roofing, CORDION uses a new bio oil-based coating technology that is:

Plastisol-free, with environmentally friendly coatings for a more sustainable and premium finish

Slightly textured for improved scratch resistance

Durable, optimised for wear resistance, weather resistance and low resource consumption

MAKE A STATEMENT WITH OUR COLOUR RANGE

With six standard colours and many more available to order, CORDION allows building owners, architects and designers informed flexibility in their design in the early stages of project development. For the best indication of colour suitability for your project, we provide a comprehensive selection of colour swatches.
